World War II Introduction

This Web page provides links to materials that can be used for doing research on World War II (Second World War, aka Great Patriotic War). It is not comprehensive, but it contains more than enough information to help most researchers. Much useful material for history is found in books. Additional resources (articles, etc.) are identified in the bibliographies of these books and in indexes and abstracts (print and electronic--a number of these are full text online). Track these resources down for thorough research. See “identifying books” for subject terms used in library catalogs for the history of World War II. In addition, there is a growing amount of useful research material, including primary resources, on the Web and through proprietary (a library purchases them) databases; a number of these are linked to here, but accessible to CSU affiliates only (or if one's own library has a subscription; access would be through that library's portal).

Warning: because of the topic (war), there are a number of linked-to sites below that show images (photographs, etc.) of the dead and other potentially disturbing sights. Books and other materials will probably have these as well.

The site has information about the track in 1942 and today; the war in Papua; four peoples at war; jungle warfare; a fighting retreat; into the mountains, Milne Bay; the tide turns; Japanese besieged; casualties; Australian Veterans' accounts. Video on initial page shows the landscape today with over text of events and dates, numbers of casualties, and images of those who fought there.

Lord Haw-Haw: The Nazi broadcaster who threatened Britain. BBC Archive.

"William Joyce, aka Lord Haw-Haw, was a notorious broadcaster of Nazi propaganda to the UK during World War II. His announcement 'Germany calling, Germany calling' was a familiar sound across the airwaves, introducing threats and misinformation that he broadcast from his Hamburg base. "In 1945, Joyce was captured and returned to Britain, where he was later hanged for treason. This collection features some of his broadcasts and interviews with those who knew him. Wartime documents reveal the fear caused by Lord Haw-Haw and how the BBC worked to counteract his propaganda."

Contemporary Speeches

Vital Speeches of the Day

All years available online full text in Academic Search Premier (ASP) and Business Source Complete (BSC) via the "Databases" page to CSU affiliates only. Once in ASP or BSC, put in the top search box: JN "Vital Speeches of the Day" AND DT 1939-1945; in the second search box (no room in the first) put "war." This finds 192 speeches that were given during the time periods of the war that mention war somewhere (may not be about WWII, but most likely is). Or put in "Vital Speeches of the Day" and change Select a Field to SO Journal Name, put "war" in the box below, click search and then use the publication date limiter on the left-hand side to narrow to 1939-1945 (which brings up 197 speeches).

In addition, when applicable, attacks on it, men lost, emblems, notes, photograph, etc. German U-boats of both World Wars are covered. There is also information about Allied forces, all Allied Warships, and more.

"The United States Army in World War II series describes the organization, plans, and operations of the War Department and the Army, in the zone of interior and in all of the Army's five theaters of operations from 1939 to 1945. Since the Army authorized the project in 1946, seventy-eight volumes have been or are being published representing an organized treasury of knowledge on the world's greatest conflict. Behind them lies one of the largest masses of records and recollections ever produced. These documents, including those of the enemy, have been explored by professional historians, with the cooperation of a host of participants and with all the facilities and assistance that the Office of the Chief of Military History and its successor, the Center of Military History, could provide to ensure that this endeavor was as comprehensive, accurate, and objective as possible. The final result has provided commanders and staff officers, historians, and students-military and civilian alike-with an unprecedented professional guide to past experience as they seek light on the uncertain path ahead.

"But the volumes are large and readers who need the knowledge contained in them are often pressed for time. Although each volume contains its own analytical index, a given subject may be discussed from various points of view in a number of volumes. The present pamphlet thus attempts to furnish the seeker of information with a finding aid which will enable him to profit more readily from the great investment of resources that the Army has devoted to extending his knowledge. This work supersedes Reader's Guide II, published in 1960."

Identifying Books

Do a search for these terms in the library catalog (and Prospector); they will work in any library catalog that uses Library of Congress Subject Headings. Items may be requested from other libraries in Prospector, the Regional Prospect, by Colorado State University affiliates. Subject terms listed in this section have 3 or more entries (these are most likely books) listed in the catalog, but there are additional terms that identify books on World War I that have one or two entries. Also look at related entries. "World War 1939-1945 Sources" identifies primary sources (see also personal accounts of the war for other primary sources, below). When you see subdivisions that end with "sources" they identify primary sources. For example: World War 1939 1945 Causes Sources.

For fastest searching, open another browser window and cut and paste (Ctrl c to copy, then Ctrl v to paste; or top menu: edit copy, edit paste) the terms found here into the subject search box in the library catalog (delete the bullet point or the search will not work):

From the initial catalog screen select Advanced Search:

Indexes & Abstracts

Identify articles by topic in these sources (these indexes are Step 1 of how to find articles). Some indexes have citations only and others have full text materials. Due to the nature of this topic, a number of really good resources (contemporary/primary ones) can only be identified via printed indexes. These valuable resources should not be neglected! Linked to CSU databases may also be found via the "A-Z Databases" page.

America: History & Life is a useful index for identifying articles and books. Subject term: World War 1939-1945. There are over 12,500 items with this subject—academic journal articles, magazine articles, conference papers, dissertations, and books. 20 of them date from 1941-1945. Items may have excerpts from primary sources.

Arts & Humanities Citation Index--Web of Science 1975-.
Identifies over 5,500 articles about World War II from History and Political Science journals. Other journal subject areas, such as International Relations, are also represented. Because there is no exact subject for World War II in this database, there will be some items in the results that aren't about the specific war.

Essay and General Literature Index. AI 3 E752 1941-47 Reference

Vol. 3 has citations to some philosophical essays about war. See pages 1739-44.

Historical Abstracts 1954-. Only one CSU user at a time. Printed version D 299 .H5 Reference South (covers history in years 1775-1945).

History of Asia, Europe, Africa, Oceania after 1500. Subject term for United States is: USA. Subject term for the war: World War 1939-1945. There are over 36,000 items with this subject—academic journal articles, magazine articles, conference papers, dissertations, and books. Items may have excerpts from primary sources.

Index to Military Periodicals Air University Library.

A search for World War II brings up nearly 15,000 results. Adding AND ships returns 26 results. Be sure to limit searches to something meaningful. Some periodical titles have hyperlinks; you will need to then look in earlier issues, archives, or the equivalent to find a specific article.

International Index to Periodicals. AI 3 I49 Reference

Identify articles from international publications.

- Vol. 8 (July 1937-March 1940) has the bulk of relevant articles under EUROPEAN war, 1939- (pages 748-62); there are about 4 pages of relevant articles under WAR.
- Vol. 9 (April 1940-March 1943), bulk of relevant articles are under WORLD war, 1939- (pages 1976-2047); major subdivisions are listed on pp. 1976-7.
It is essential that you carefully evaluate whatever you might find, no matter the format. See: How to Evaluate Journal Articles How to Evaluate Books, How to Evaluate a Web Page and How to Evaluate a Movie, Video, or Film Clip.

New York Times 1851-. CSU affiliates only.

If doing research on a particular topic, narrow the search by date (Date: From January 1939 to December 1945) and use those terms AND add additional terms to narrow your search results. For example:

- submarine warfare
- naval warfare
- "war in the pacific" (over 24,000 results without the quotation marks; with 941)
- Hitler (over 31,000 results)
- women (over 159,000 results)

Contemporary articles about the war will be in the database, but selected items are missing starting 1923-; missing articles and photographs can be identified in the printed index for the New York Times and seen on the microfilm copy of the newspaper: AN 1 .N4 MICROFILM (Journal Room).

Project MUSE Various starting dates. CSU affiliates only.

Full text articles from the humanities and social sciences, including over forty history journals. All of these are recent journal articles, so they are all secondary sources; however, a number of them look as if they might contain excerpts from letters and other primary source materials. Note: a search for World War II brings up a number of articles about World War I.

An excellent resource for contemporary, and therefore primary sources about the war. Look up the abbreviations of the journal names at the front of the printed index before looking in the library catalog for ownership (step 3 how to find articles; then do step 4, determine if the library owns the journal). Many of these resources will be in storage (request directly from the library catalog record), so plan ahead.

This resource is a good place to browse for ideas—in addition, you will know there is at least one contemporary article on that particular topic!

Times Digital Archive 1785-. CSU affiliates only. Also The Times (London). 1788-. AN T5 Microfilm (Basement West). Palmer’s Index to the Times Newspaper. A1 21 T51 Basement West.

London newspaper. Get a perspective of the war from England. The online database also searches the Sunday Times (London) and 19th Century Newspapers (you might want to deselect the latter). Because there have been numerous conflicts, researchers will want to limit their search to AFTER 1938 (or other nearby dates such as AFTER 1930 if trying to identify the precursors for it). Full text. Use magnifier to get size of text (which varies by the length and width of text) comfortable to read. Limit by publication section or article type (other limiters not relevant when searching the Times and Sunday Times only). Contemporary vocabulary will be vital for success.

The printed index is year by year during the war; each year has been divided into four, so look for topics four times in each year: January-March, April-June, July-September, and October-December. Be careful to note which "J" (January, June, or July) in the first three quarters before going to the microfilm. In the first two quarters, "m" could be March or May. In the middle quarters "a" could be April or August. In other words, note which quarter you are in and spell out j, m, and a months—and include the year, because the year is not included as part of individual citations (but is noted in the right-side page headers).

These volumes are getting fragile—PLEASE BE GENTLE.
The impact of World War II on Missourians can be seen in the State Historical Society of Missouri's collections of newspapers, letters, diaries, records, photographs, and memoirs written during or about wartime military service. The collections also offer materials pertaining to civilian life during wartime and information on veterans' organizations. He was one of the first Americans killed in battle in World War II. After that morning attack on Pearl Harbor, the United States was thrust into the Second World War, which ultimately involved more than 100 million people from 30 different countries throughout the world. Missourians fought on nearly every front of the war, with around 450,000 Missouri residents serving in the military.
