Working with the BBC, Neil MacGregor, the Director of the British Museum, has launched a downright smart project. A History of the World in 100 Objects uses important pieces from the museum's collections to recount the long history of humanity. Throughout the year, the serialized radio program will air 100 episodes, each averaging 15 minutes, and they will cover two million years of human innovation and artistic creation. Below, I've included a recent episode that revisits the Olduvai hand axe, a tool invented some 1.2 million years ago that proved vital to human evolution and our mi
An enthralling and profoundly humane book that every civilized person should read.” --The Wall Street Journal

The blockbuster New York Times bestseller and the companion volume to the wildly popular radio series

When did people first start to wear jewelry or play music? When were cows domesticated, and why do we feed their milk to our children? Where were the first cities, and what made them succeed? Who developed math—or invented money? The history of humanity is one of invention and innovation, as we have continually created new things to use, to admire, or leave our mark on the world.

The ebook age has taken ‘the book’ to a turning point. But in fact, casting off old technologies and taking on new ones has been part of the history of the book since Egyptian times. Illustrating this story with lavish photography of some of the most treasured artefacts from the world’s historic collections, A History of the Book in 100 Books traces mankind’s very long quest to communicate ideas and knowledge.
